ASHRAE Standing Standard Project Committee 300

ABOUT THESE ANNEXES

ASHRAE SSPC 300 (Standing Standard Project Committee 300) was established to coordinate several ASHRAE standards and guidelines that deal with the commissioning process and its implementation. Part of this coordination effort extends to ensuring that the informative annexes referred to by the various commissioning standards and guidelines are aligned and current. SSPC 300, with the agreement of ASHRAE standards and publications, has developed common annexes that are part of more than one commissioning standard or guideline. These common annexes are being systematically removed from within the respective referring standards and guidelines and placed here on the SSPC 300 website. This allows, for example, the annex addressing Basis of Design to be coordinated across the five standards and guidelines that refer to it and to be kept current through a process of ongoing review and revision.

Each of the annexes on this website has been developed by one or more subcommittees of SSPC 300, reviewed by members of the subcommittee(s), and approved for posting as an official annex by SSPC 300. Each annex has then been reviewed by ASHRAE Standards and ASHRAE Publications staff for conformance with ASHRAE expectations for quality. Although informative, the annexes herein are formal elements of the ASHRAE standards and guidelines that refer to them. Likewise, these annexes are not stand-alone elements—and should only be used in conjunction with a referring standard or guideline. These annexes are copyrighted by ASHRAE and may be used only in conformance with such copyright provisions.

The term annex on this website refers to information that supplements more than one commissioning standard or guideline. Thus, all these annexes are “common annexes” that apply to multiple commissioning process or application situations. [The term appendix is used by SSPC 300 to describe supplemental material that is either normative in nature or that is informative but only applicable to a single standard or guideline. Appendices are not published on this website and are instead published as a part of the standard or guideline that uses them.]

The matrix below provides a mapping of the annexes available on this website and their linkages to specific commissioning standards and guidelines. This matrix is provided for navigational purposes only and is not part of any standard or guideline.
